

Awards, Honors and Scholarships 2021

The Indiana Library Federation offers a number of awards, honors, and scholarships to recognize outstanding contributions from Indiana's libraries, librarians, library staff, supporters, volunteers, champions, and partners AND to encourage professional growth.

The nomination process opens each winter and closes June 30 for most awards and April 30 for scholarships. The ILF Awards Committee reviews nominations and makes recommendations to the ILF Board of Directors. Most awards are announced at the ILF Annual Meeting; winners are invited to an Awards Banquet at the ILF Annual Conference. See www.ilfonline.org for nominating information and deadlines.

Honors and recognizes a library system or branch of a library system that has successfully provided ongoing, innovative, and diverse programming designed to meet its community's needs.

Minimum Criteria for Consideration:

- Nominee must be an Indiana Library Federation institutional member, and if a public library, with its trustees listed for Indiana Library Trustees/Supporter Association.

Documentation and supporting information should:

- Incorporate a statement of need/rationale for type of programming;
- Indicate a broad range of programming;
- Represent all departments and areas of the library;
- Include statistical data;
- Provide a portfolio of five (5) to no more than twenty (20) items of documentation comprised of letters of support, publicity, and in-house publications that give concrete examples of these contributions.
- Awards to branch libraries must indicate that the programming is independent of the system.

Sara Laughlin Marketing Award

Honors and recognizes a library for its successful, creative, and contemporary marketing efforts. The award is presented to an institution or part of an institution, e.g., a department, program, or initiative that met the criteria for excellence in its marketing efforts during the year and may include a monetary award. Individuals may not apply.

The monetary award ($1,000) may be given for an exemplary marketing program that:

- Makes creative use of current marketing approaches that focus on two-way communication with library customers and potential customers
- Calls attention to the indispensable role of the library in the community and demonstrates results

Minimum Criteria for Consideration:

- Nominee must be an Indiana Library Federation institutional member for the year of presentation.
- Submission of five (5) and ten (10) items of documentation comprised of planning and program materials, data, evaluation, letters of support, and in-house publications that give concrete examples of:
 - How ongoing communication with library customers helped determine needs and measure satisfaction with service;
 - How data about and from customers was used in making decisions about library services;
 - How creative use of resources helped carry out the marketing program and meet customer needs;
 - How the marketing effort resulted in positive outcomes, including creative use, users, or support.

If a monetary award is provided, the receiving library must submit a report about how the funds were used. While there is no formal expectation for use of the award, the donor's intent is to incentivize continued innovation and success.
